OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

FROM WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW

New Year's resolutions are in the air, and even though many of them do not live through the month they are to be encouraged for the mere fact of turning thought in a fresh direction. I cannot tell you how many women I have seen struggling through a determination to fight down nerves-that many of them will not succeed in the smallest particular is to be expected-but the one or two who really win a victory will serve as beacons to the weak ones later or.

.... Nerves will drive the sex just as long as women attempt to crowd the day and clip bits from sleeping hours. To be busy is to be reasonably happy and healthy, but there are limits to reason, and women should learn the value of union hours. I have always maintained that work done in the face of protest from tired body and brain is of small value-it could be better done in half the time under happier conditions-yet women stick to a piece of sewing or a bit of household work, fully conscious that every nerve is strained beyond a healthy point. Then we wonder why nervous diseases are so common.

The wise woman takes up a single task, gives it her whole attention, and when it has been disposed of attacks another, She knows when she is tired, and appreclates the value of rest, and in the long run can count as many victories to hor credit as any fair-minded woman need expect. She is not the kind of woman who needs to be sent away for treatment, for her nerves are generally under con-

The father of a growing family told me that he believed the children were being handicapped by an inheritance of nerves. He said that even the wisest guidance could not wholly eradicate them, and that it was his belief that the remedy would be found in eliminating useless tasks from the lives of women. If they took up a business life, let them be like men in the avoidance of other labor, and if they elected to be wives and mothers, let them study their vocation like any profession, pruning and clipping all dead wood in the shape of useless endeavor. That is something to think about, my friends, when we are tempted to squander precious moments on work which means nothing more than the gratification of the hour. There is necessary work to be done-why look for the other kind? Life has a great deal to offer to those who are not too hurried to see From the Philadelphia Press. BETTY BRADEEN.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

Did you ever stop to realize what a vast pleasure ne can get out of successful contriving?

"If just once I could go somewhere without planning and contriving what I should wear, it seems to me I should be perfectly happy. This borrowing sister's wrap and mother's gloves and saving every cent to get a new hat, takes away half the pleasure," I heard a girl say the other day.

And she laughed me to scorn when I ventured to suggest that perhaps the opposite was true, and that perhaps the planning and contriving really gave, instead of taking away, pleasure

And still I think I'm right.

The pleasure of possession that you purchase by careful planning, that you snatch despite the cautions of your prudence, that you deny yourself something else for, that you wait for and long for and work for weeks or months before you finally obtain it, has a sweetness that can be gained in no other way. If the time ever comes when my lady of the bewailings does not need to contrive, when half a dozen gowns, a choice of evening wraps, and a dozen gloves await her pleasure, I think the day will also come when she will look back upon the excitement of producing a successful outfit from the four corners of the earth, and realize that that contriving was a pleasure, and as great a one as she can command now, despite her

I remember a queer little example of the joy of contriving. When I was a little girl my brother and I had a printing press with which we used to print cards for all the children of the neighborhood. We had a rather scanty supply of type and there was often a shortage of "e's." Brother, however, constructed a method of turning the "a's" upside down so that they made quite respectable "e's," and with this addition to our supply we took great pleasure in managing to "get by."

Then one Christmas some one gave us a large supply of type. At first we were sure that was the one thing on earth we had needed to complete our happiness, and then, strangely enough-or rather naturally enough-we found that along with the need of contriving at least half the fun had gone.

Charles Lamb has an essay nominally on Old China, but really on the joy of contriving-that I think every poor man ought to read. I'd like to quote it bodily, but since I haven't the room, I'll just give you two of the best paragraphs:

"When you came home with twenty apologies for laying out a less number of shillings upon that print which we christened the Lady Blanche; when you looked at the purchase, and thought of the moneyand looked again at the purchase-was there no pleasure in being a poor man? Now you have nothing to do but to walk into Colnaghi's and buy a wilderness of prints. Yet you do?

"I wish the good old times would come again when we were not quite so rich. I do not mean I want to be poor; but there was a middle state in which I am sure we were a great deal happier. A purchase is but a purchase now that we have money enough and to spare. Formerly it used to be a triumph. A thing was worth buying then when we felt the money that we paid for."

No: I'm not saying that I wouldn't like to be rich. Like the rest of the world, in many ways, I wouldn't mind trying what it would be like to have more money than I could possibly use. But I do believe that I would lose, and that the poor old man possesses a very great pleasure that the rich never know-the joy of contriving.

A DOG STORY.

A large black dog, of stately mien, was walking o'er the village green, on some important errand bent; a little cur, not worth a cent, observed him passing by, and growled, and barked a while, and yapped, and howled. The big one did not deign a look, but walked along, like prince or dook. The cur remarked, beneath its breath: "That big four-flusher's scared to death! Those great big brutes are never game; now just watch Fido climb his frame!" The big black dog went stalking on, as calm and tranquil as the dawn; he knew the cur was at his heels; he heard its yaps and snarls and squeals, and yet he never looked around, or blinked an eye, or made a sound; his meditations had a tone that mangy pups have never known. The cur, unnoticed, lost all fear; it grabbed the big dog by the ear; the latter paused just long enough to take the small one by the scruff, and shake him gently to and fro; and then he let poor Fido go, and said, in quiet tones: "Now get!" And Fido's doubtless running yet. Suppose you see if you can nail the moral hidden in this tale. WALT MASON.

CHURCHHONORS DR. STAFFORD ARMY AND NAVY.

St. Patrick's Congregation Observes High Requiem Mass.

Auditorium Filled with Those Who Loved Him as Pastor and Friend, No Word of Eulogy.

Friends from many parishes of Rev. Dr. D. J. Stafford, pupils of St. Patrick's Academy and High School, orphan boys of St. Joseph's Asylum, and representatives from sisterhoods and religious organizations made up a congregation that filled St. Patrick's Church yesterday at the solemn high requiem mass, celebrated on the occasion of the second anniversary of the death of its

Rev. William J. Carroll, who was closely associated with Dr. Stafford during his long illness, and was one of his most devoted friends, was the celebrant of the mass, with Rev. T. E. McGuigan as deacon, and Rev. Dr. William T, Russell, present pastor, as sub-deacon. Rev. Cornelius Haggerty, of Holy Cross College, Catholic University, and Rev. James O'Connor, of St. Augustine's Church, assisted in the sanctuary. No word of sulogy was spoken, and none was needed.

For those who had assembled in renembrance of Dr. Stafford in the church he loved, and for which his great talent was so freely given, the surroundings recalled too eloquently his passionate love of the beautiful in religion, and his zeal for the glory of the house of God. The music of the mass was Gregorian. It was sung by the solo quartet of the mixed choir, composed of Mrs. Annie Grant Fugitt, soprano; Mrs. F. B. Gilmore ontralto; Dr. William Kemball, tenor and Arthur Porter, bass. "Pie Jesu," by Schnuit, for soprano solo and quartet, was sung at the offertory, and after the mass, Lead Kindly Light." Armand Gumprecht presided at the organ. While he ongregation was dispersing, he played the funeral march from Beethoven's 'Grand Sonata."

BLESSED JOAN OF ARC.

Eather Fortier to Deliver Lecture on Maid of Orleans,

The many Washington friends of Rev Matthew L. Fortler, S. J., will be giad to know that he is to deliver his lecture on "Blessed Joan of Are" at Carroll Institute on Thursday, January 6, the 498th anniversary of the birth of the Maid of Orleans.

Father Fortier has made a very close study of the subject, and being of French extraction, he has probably entered into it with a more sympathetic enthusiasm than is usually the basis of historical research. The lecture will be beautifully illustrated with colored views made in Paris from paintings and sculptures by the masters, and will include many tableaux vivants and photographs of historic scenes that took part in the career of Joan of Arc.

Father Fortier was a member of the faculty of Gonzaga College, this olty, during the year 1906-07. Leaving Washngton in the latter year, he went to St. Andrews-on-Hudson. He was later sent to Loyola College, Baltimore, where he has been professor of logic for the past two years. Father Fortier has published several original works, as well as one or more translations from the French His lecture on Joan of Arce will also be given in Baltimore this week.
